SEC v Complete Business Solutions Group Inc. et al
Case No. 9:20-cv-81205-RAR

I had issued an Objection earlier this year but was dismissed in an email because the worksheets I completed for the Receiver agreed with their files. When competing the worksheets, I followed the instructions the Receiver provided so the total net investment amounts did agree however my objection is against the calculation.

Since the contracts for prior years were completed, I believe the lawsuit is to recover the current principal outstanding and the calculation should be for the current open year contracts netting the interest for the current year against the principal.

We are not trying to recover payments to people who had contracts in prior years but did not renew them for 2020 so using the receiver's calculation penalizes current contract holders that rolled over their prior years closed contracts. The distribution to investors that only started in the final year would be unfairly weighted. Why should they receive 75% and an older investor with the same contract amount may only get 25%?

To be fair, all the investors for the final year should be treated equally and the refunds calculated the same.

We also paid income tax on the interest in prior years so if you are going to use the receiver's calculation, there should be an adjustment for taxes.

Thank you for your consideration.
