This is the same message I sent to the receiver, so I mailed it to the honorable court.

Claim #7*

To claim we were part of a Ponzi scheme in any way is an insult to every investor!! I trusted the people I talked with regarding my ABFP investment and was greatly reassured that my investment would make 12% returns for a term of one year, at which time I could choose to reinvest for another year or get ALL of my initial investment back.

They clearly relayed to me that my full investment would be returned at the end of the term and I would make the interest income each month.

This is all my late husband left for me and our kids. I tried to make a sound decision for the money and how to invest it. I had numerous phone calls with Vagnozzi and Andrew Zuch who claimed to be a wealth advisor.

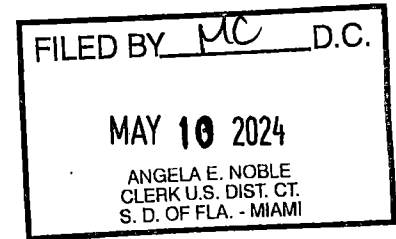

I didn't give them my money just to let them use it for 4 years!! You want to just give us back what we invested minus any earned interest which equates to only our initial investment. That's like giving money to someone for free - to use for 4 years at their pleasure!!!

Who does that??? Stop being crooked! I am a mom, a sister, the wife to a man who died way too young, a grandmother, a friend, a Christian. I have exercised great patience with this whole situation and long suffering.

However, as an honest person who understands God's judgement and loves the Lord, I expect the same honest behavior back to me. You may think this is a wise plan you all are creating but you too will have to answer for what you do one day when you stand before God.

On your day before the Lord, you will have no excuse that is good enough because He knows your heart and your motives. I would think wisely before trying to harm the investors, such as myself, because you think it's a good idea! Doing the wrong thing, the dishonest thing, always comes back around to you. Just do the right thing by us.

• We were victims not participants in a scheme!
